How to use Aviation Fieldbook

Written on 14 November 2026.

What the site is

Aviation Fieldbook is a guide for Canadian students looking at aviation careers. It is run independently. It is not Transport Canada, a flight school, or the Air Cadet League. The site does not decide who is eligible, who will pass a medical, or what a school should charge.

Build my path

Students open Build my path and answer a few questions: age, province, stage, and whether they are an Air Cadet. The page builds a checklist in the browser and reads the scholarships. Each award comes back as Likely fits, Check eligibility, or Not eligible, with a short reason. Answers stay on the device. If a student leaves a group blank, an award limited to that group stays on Check eligibility.

The catalogue and the guides

The catalogue lists scholarships, cadet courses, and programs. Each one has an official link and the date it was last checked. Four guides are rebuilt with the site: scholarships in British Columbia, for Air Cadets, for women in Canada, and those closing this month.

Deadlines and the poster

Dated awards have an Add to calendar link. Subscribe to every upcoming deadline from the deadline calendar. Print the one-page poster for a career centre or a squadron board. The QR code on this page opens the site.

Corrections

If a date or an amount looks wrong, use the feedback form and include the official source. Do not send medical details or application documents. Being listed does not mean a student will receive the award.
